

HASTENING THE TRANSITION TO IP NETWORKS

Implications for Consumers, Industry, and Regulators

National Press Club
Washington, D.C.
June 8, 2004

SPEAKER BIOGRAPHIES

Kathryn C. Brown is senior vice president-public policy development at Verizon Communications. Before joining Verizon, Ms. Brown was a partner at Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering and a member of the firm's Communications and Electronic Commerce practice. For two years, Ms. Brown was the Chief of Staff of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). She also previously served as the Chief of the FCC's Common Carrier Bureau. Before working at the FCC, Ms. Brown was the Associate Administrator, Office of Policy Analysis and Development, at the U.S. Department of Commerce's National Telecommunications & Information Administration. Ms. Brown also worked for eight years at the New York State Public Service Commission as the Director of the Consumer Services Division and as Litigation Attorney and Managing Attorney for Telecommunications with the Office of General Counsel. Ms. Brown received her J.D., summa cum laude, from Syracuse University College of Law in 1980 and her B.A., magna cum laude, from Marist College in 1974. She is admitted to practice in New York and the District of Columbia.

Rick Cimerman joined the National Cable & Telecommunications Association (NCTA) in 1995 and is now Senior Director of State Telecommunications Policy. He co-chairs the Congressional Internet Caucus Advisory Committee's Broadband Task Force, serves as program Chair for the NARUC-NECA National Summit on Broadband Deployment and is past president of the National Coalition for Technology and Education in Training (NCTET). He served three years as Director of the Telecommunications Division of the Maryland PSC, at a time when Maryland became one of the first states to allow local exchange competition. Mr. Cimerman also worked for two and a half years at the Florida PSC with an emphasis on competition and emerging competition issues.

David Reed is executive vice president and chief strategy officer for CableLabs. He is responsible for the development of forward strategy for both technical initiatives and the cable industry. He also leads the Strategic Assessment area responsible for research and development projects addressing telecommunications technology assessment, business, economic, strategic and public policy issues of immediate interest to member companies. Prior to March 2004, he was Chief Technical Officer and Senior Vice President of Strategic Planning. Mr. Reed has been at CableLabs since 1994 during which time he has helped launch the highly-successful PacketCable, Go2Broadband, CableHome, Strategic Assessment and Bandwidth Management programs. Before working at CableLabs, Dr. Reed served for three years at the Federal Communications Commission as a Telecommunications Policy Analyst in the Office of Plans and Policy where he worked on video dialtone, personal communications services (PCS), and spectrum auction policies.

HASTENING THE TRANSITION TO IP NETWORKS

Implications for Consumers, Industry, and Regulators

Jonathan Sallet has combined a career in politics, public policy, the private sector and the law. He is currently an independent consultant. Mr. Sallet was active in 2003 - 2004 as Communications Director and Senior Strategist to Joe Lieberman's presidential campaign. Mr. Sallet served in the Clinton/Gore Administration as Assistant to the Secretary and Director of the Office of Policy & Strategic Planning in the Department of Commerce, focusing on economic and technology policy. From 1996-2000, Mr. Sallet served as Chief Policy Counsel of MCI (later MCI WorldCom) where he concentrated on issues arising from the implementation of the Telecommunications Act, including the opening of monopoly markets to competition and where he oversaw merger reviews concerning BT, WorldCom and Sprint. His technology experience also includes work with Ira Magaziner on technologies to guard privacy.

Brooke Schulz is vice president for corporate communications at Vonage where she oversees public relations, regulatory affairs, marketing communications and internal communications programs. Prior to joining Vonage, Ms. Schulz was a senior account executive at public relations firm Weber Shandwick Worldwide. At Weber, Ms. Schulz worked with a variety of technology companies in the telecommunications and consumer electronics space including management of telecommunications, consumer electronics, and consumer brand accounts for the New York office including Broadwing Communications, 360 Networks, Sharp Electronics, American Airlines and 'all' detergent. Prior to joining Weber Shandwick, Ms. Schulz was with Ruder Finn Public relations in their healthcare group working with pharmaceutical products from Schering Plough and Novartis. She holds a bachelor's degree in English from the University of California Los Angeles.

David E. Young is director of Internet & technology policy in Verizon's Public Policy and External Affairs department. Before joining that department, he spent six years working in research & development on many advanced technologies including Internet telephony, data network architectures, and audio, video & image compression, and holds nine US patents. Mr. Young began his career in telecommunications with New Jersey Bell, where he worked in a variety of operations and staff positions. He received his degree in Electrical Engineering from Stevens Institute of Technology.